You can play Lethal Company solo, but it's not easy. It's so not-easy that I honestly don't recommend it at all unless you really want to brag about your skills and luck. Since the game's meant to be played with multiple people, it's made exponentially easier with one player in the ship and at least one delving into scrap-laden buildings.

The latest game to have taken Steam by storm is Lethal Company. This is an intense new indie horror game where players are tasked with scavenging on derelict moons known as Lethal Companies. The game is a great experience with friends and serves up plenty of great scares and thrills.

I know that snare fleas will let you go if you stop moving (They'll let you go even if you keep moving, as long as you have enough health) in solo, while in multiplayer you can only shovel it or leave the building, and was wondering how many other differences there are for solo. One difference I think might exist, but am not sure about, is enemies opening doors faster in ...

really don't recommend solo play. it's a little too reliant on RNG, and too punishing in the case of a failure. since the surface level goal is to be able to have enough scrap on board to meet the company quota for sales within 3 days, and you lose all scrap (including scrap onboard the ship) every time your party wipes, it really isn't friendly for a solo experience.

You absolutely can play Lethal Company solo. To do this, you need to start a LAN game followed and confirm it so that you can host it. There are only two choices of launch: Online and LAN. Since no one else is in a LAN party with you, you'll be playing by yourself. Just start the game, and you'll find yourself alone on the ship.

The Flea is actually already nerfed when playing solo as it can't kill you. It can only bring you to critical health and will then drop you. I've also noticed lesser monster spawns when playing solo. There are certain things I'd still tweak with solo mode though, however the game clearly already can tell if you play solo and there are already ...
