The long power reserve was introduced to meet the strict requirements of the commandos of the Italian Navy who had to rely on an instrument of complete and enduring reliability. In the early 1960s, Panerai used a 16-ligne Angelus calibre, which would run for eight days.

3 ; The left-handed crown makes the latest Luminor surprisingly comfortable to wear. Photo by Johnny Brayson for Gear Patrol. Since the Luminor Destro's in-house Cal. P.5000 manually-wound movement has a whopping 8-day power reserve on tap, it's not like you have ...

1 ; Panerai makes two more aesthetic changes to the PAM00915 to arrive at the PAM01655. For starters, the new Destro comes with a sapphire-equipped display case back. Second, the black leather strap makes way for a sand-colored alternative, matching the lume. The strap is ...

The luminous Arabic numerals and hour markers are in the classic Panerai style, easily legible in any environment. The watch has two main complications: a GMT hand and a three-day power reserve indicator at 5 o'clock. It also has a seconds sub-dial with a blue seconds hand, which gives the watch a nice splash of colour.
