People ask this a lot, but I really don't think it's a good idea to compare your hair and your washing schedule to someone else's. What we have in common is that we wash our hair when it feels dirty - and that's a good rule of thumb. You need to take care of your hair, not mine. I don't think it's unusual at all to wash your hair daily.

To ensure coloured hair stays fresher for longer, we recommend washing one to three times per week, and using a shampoo that's specifically designed for colour-treated hair. One of our go-tos is INVIGO Color Brilliance Color Protection Shampoo which is pH-optimized, meaning it helps to close the cuticle after washing to boost colour retention.

Sebum is a natural oily substance secreted by the scalp, which can become chemically altered and irritating to the skin with extended residence time. Shampooing can help remove the buildup of sebum, which can make the hair greasy and unmanageable. (2) Some people believe that they need to shower every day to maintain good hygiene.

I think the massaging of your scalp when you wash your hair and the pleasant smell from the shampoo helps to de stress. That is probably why it seems like you are excising demons. It is different from washing our bodies since we don't wash our locs everyday, so washing our hair feels more like a ritual cleansing than basic hygiene.
